SEARCHING FOR THE TRUTH? JOIN US!

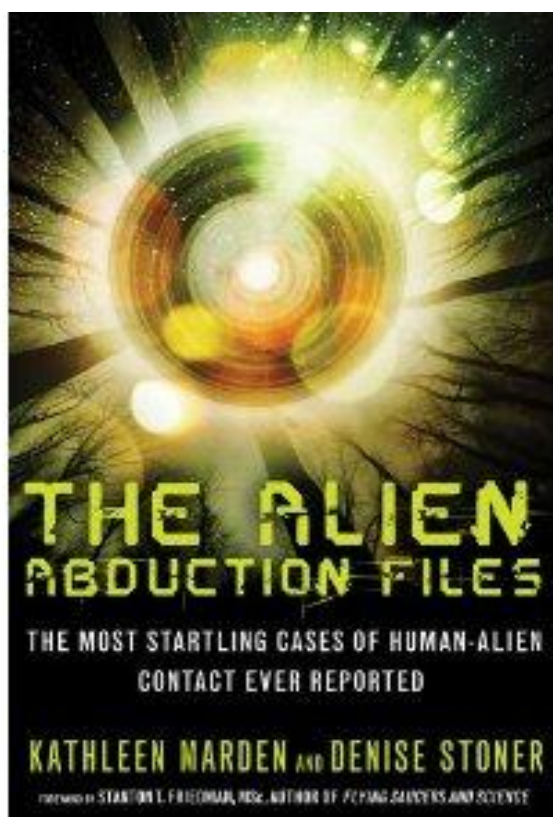

We are a group of dedicated investigators and researchers looking for the truth. We share varied backgrounds and many years in the fields of Ufology, Abduction, Crypto zoology and the Paranormal. The sharing of research, resources and knowledge has greatly enhanced our investigative capabilities. We offer a website that reaches all corners of the United States and many Foreign Countries. The use of our databases and photo lab not to mention a vast array of collective knowledge from what we consider some of the best in the field. There is a monthly newsletter to get your information out and a direct connection for you to receive reports. If you have an interest in joining us contact butch@paufosearch.com

MIG was founded in 2000 to provide a reporting venue for witnesses of unusual events. Many unusual events occur in Missouri each year, which are not reported and subsequently are not investigated. A goal of MIG is to have representatives in each of the 115 Missouri counties. This would create a reporting network of spotters who will be aware of what is happening in their areas and report current activity to the group. Director Barbara Becker.

If you are interested in participating in this effort, please email ufomig@yahoo.com

I represent MIG, the Missouri Investigators Group based in Columbia, Mo. <http://ufomig.yolasite.com>. We investigate UFO, Animal Mutilation, Bigfoot, Crop Circle and Abduction reports in Missouri and surrounding states. If anyone in Oregon County has experienced anything unusual, please contact me by email at UFOMIG@yahoo.com or go to our website and make a report. <http://ufomig.yolasite.com/online-report-form.php> all information will be kept confidential.

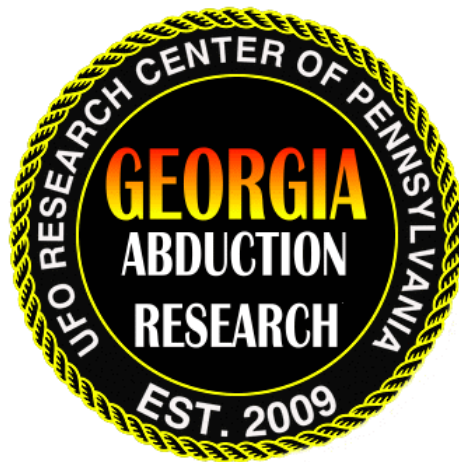

Thank you, Barbara Becker

Alien Abduction

The terms or abduction phenomenon describes "memories of being taken against one's will by apparently nonhuman entities, and subjected to complex physical and psychological procedures." People claiming to have been abducted are usually called "abductees" or "experiencers." Typical claims involve being subjected to a forced medical examination that emphasizes their reproductive system.

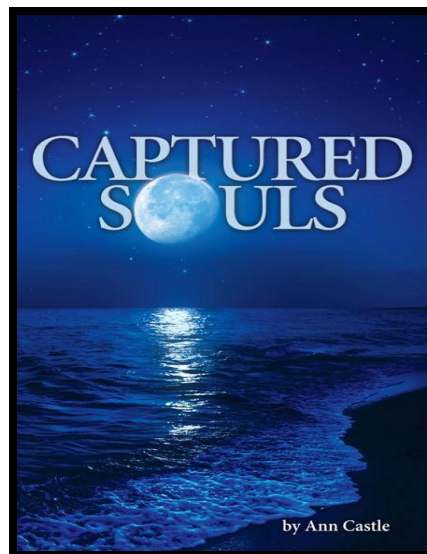

Abductees sometimes claim to have been warned against environmental abuse and the dangers of nuclear weapons. Consequently, while many of these purported encounters are described as terrifying, some have been viewed as pleasurable or transformative.

NEWS FROM THE INSTITUTE OF FRONTIER SCIENCE

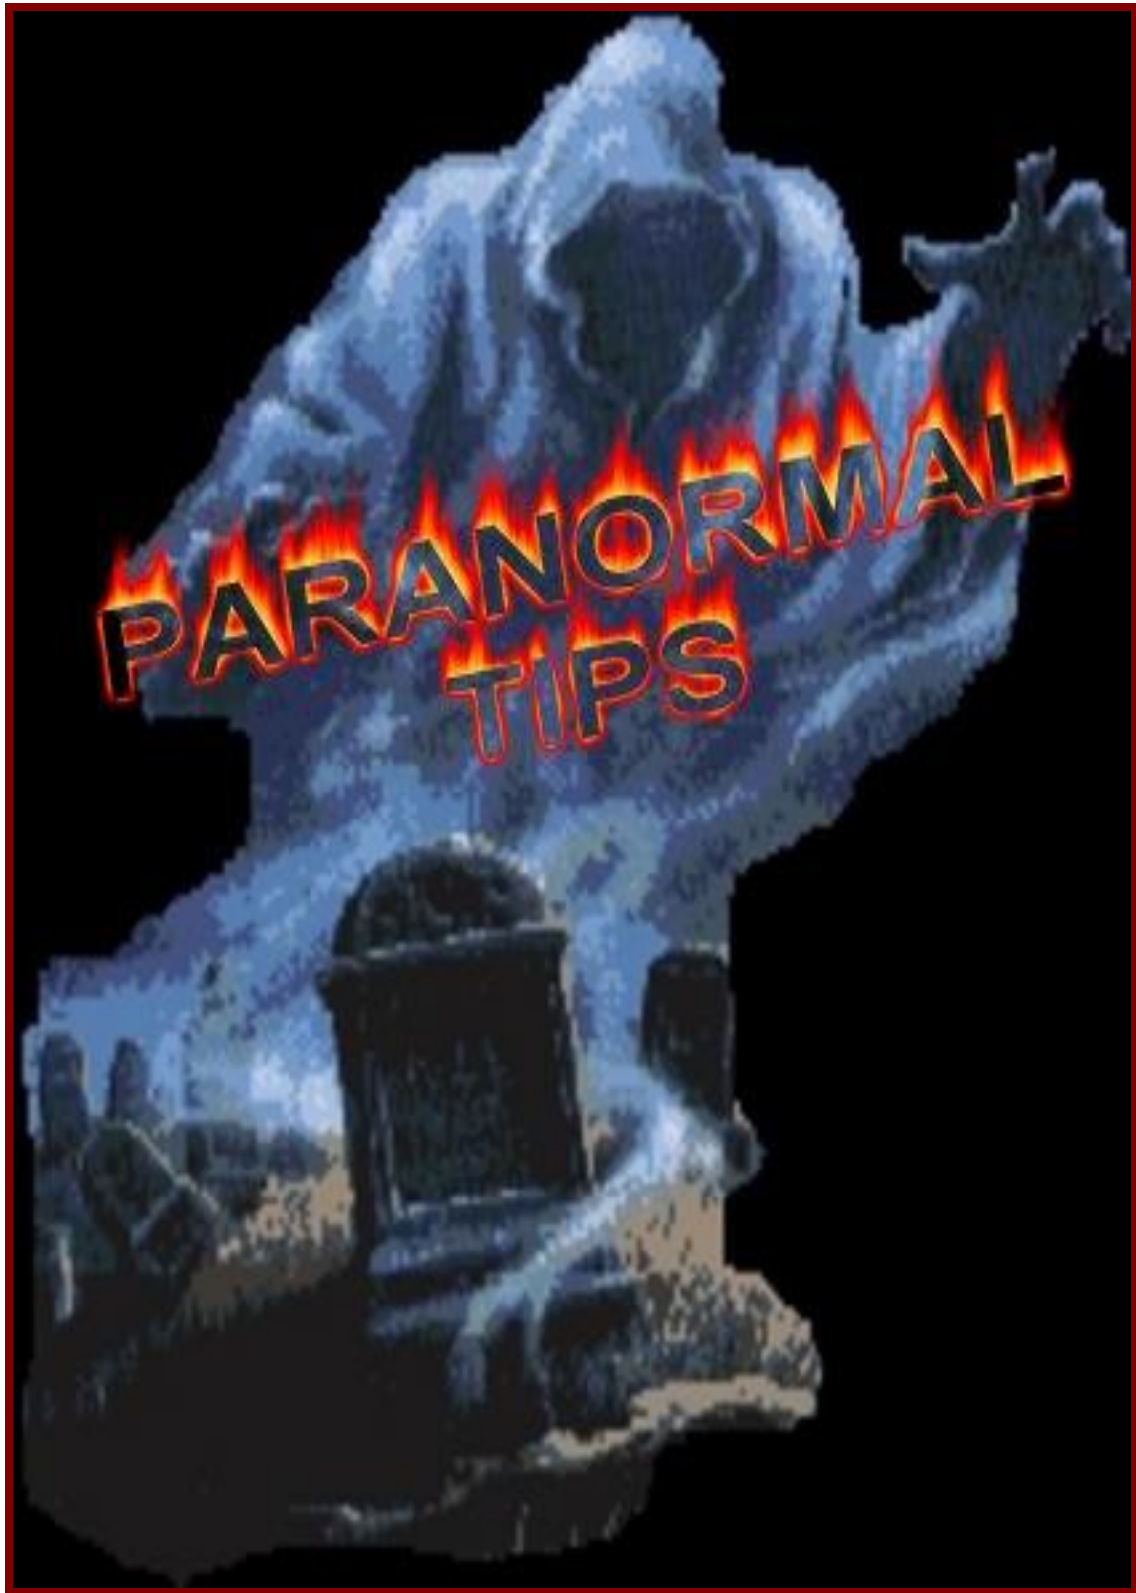

The Institute Of Frontier Science gives a great opportunity for those who are writing or making reports in the field of Ufology, as well as seasoned researchers.

Its founder and leader is Steven S. Bass, who in addition to being the Founder and Director of the Institute is also well known and respected by everyone involved in the Ufology community.

"The Institute of Frontier Science is an elite fellowship of highly experienced and knowledgeable specialists in the scientific field of Ufology."

The Institute of Frontier Science offers people the chance to embark on the truths that lie within the UFO genre. IFS will also educate the uneducated on a subject that has been kept behind closed doors for much too long. The institute will take time to build, but already has the "Big Guns" in place. IFS is for the truth and nothing but. People are encouraged to join this great undertaking, for what I am sure will be a rewarding and educational venture into the science of Ufology.

PENNSYLVANIA PARANORMAL

CARBON COUNTY JAILHOUSE HANDPRINT

The coal barons of the late 1800s were an unscrupulous band of moneygrubbers who kept the mostly Irish and Welsh workforce squashed firmly under their thumbs. As the miners chipped away at the anthracite deposits in the Pennsylvania mountainside, they earned only pennies—and the coal barons sopped the cost of their supplies out of that meager pittance. It was a social situation that often leads to revolution—and the revolutionaries in this scene were the Molly Maguire's. This secret society committed acts of sabotage and, according to the coal barons, murders (something the management knew plenty about, since they stooped to it themselves if their profits were threatened).

Of course, the plutocrats had money, power, and therefore the law on their side, which made it all the easier to dispose of a troublemaker. During one of the Molly Maguire trials, the inhabitant of Cell 17 vehemently proclaimed his innocence, but he was sentenced to death anyway. On hanging day, before he was taken from his cell, he slapped his hand, dirty from the cell floor, on the wall, and exclaimed, "This is the hand of an innocent man!"

In those days, innocence was no defense, so he died that day. But his handprint remained, and came back even after it was scrubbed off. Over the next century, the cell was cleaned, repainted, re-plastered, and always the hand reappeared in a day or so. It's still there to this day.

PENNSYLVANIA LEGENDS

Phantom Drummer

Retold by S. E. Schlosser

Now when Colonel Howell of the British Army chanced to meet the daughter of the wealthy farmer Jarrett, who owned land near Valley Forge, he fell head-over-heels in love. Howell had a bit of a reputation as a womanizer, but it faded away after he met Ruth. The girl had a brother serving under Washington and none of her family liked the red coats, but so overwhelming was Howell's love for her that it conquered the reluctant maiden's heart.

Ruth and her British soldier met in a secret place near the wall of her garden, which was hidden by a small grove of trees. On the night that Howell proposed, they were standing near the wall when the sharp, merry sound of a drummer rang through the garden. At first they ignored the noise, caught up in their plans for the future, but as the sound of the drum grew nearer, Howell started looking about nervously and even peering over the wall, trying to see the drummer.

Ruth was puzzled by Howell's reaction. No one could see them in this little grove, which was why they used it for their trysts. "What is wrong?" she cried, hurrying to him. "There is no one there," Howell told Ruth hoarsely. Ruth stared at him, frightened by his words. The roll of the drum still rang through the fields beyond the wall.

"But surely..." she began. She was interrupted by a phantom rat-a-tat-tat. The sound drew closer. As they listened in horror, it came right through the garden gate just beyond the trees. The invisible drummer entered their little hollow and passed right through the wall next to them. Only when it ceased altogether did Howell snap out of the fear-induced trance he was in. He convulsively clasped Ruth to his chest. No less frightened, Ruth begged Howell to tell her what it could mean.

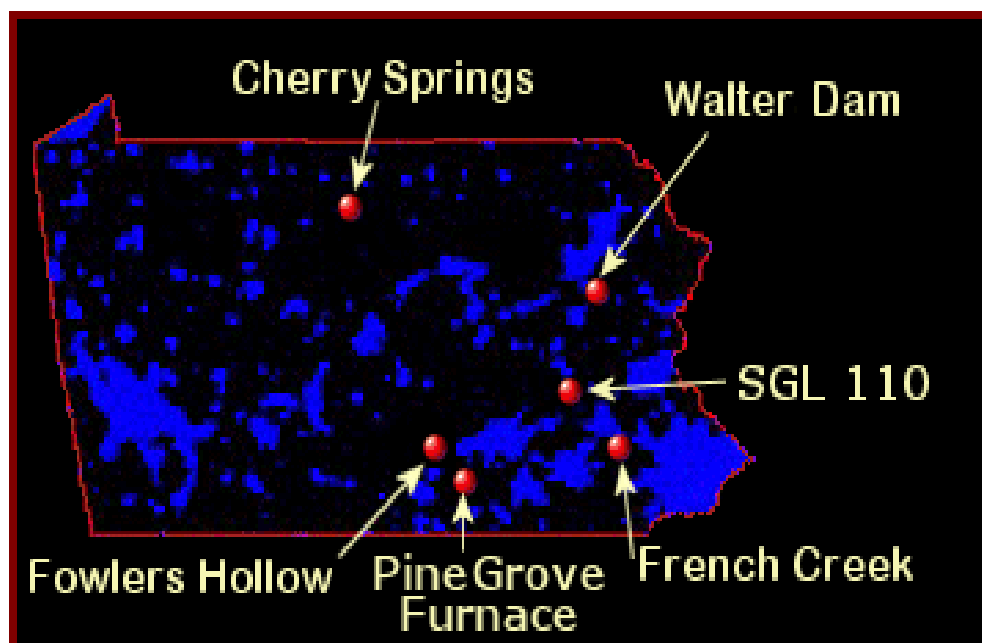

"For the last three generations," Howell said shakily, "a phantom drummer has appeared to warn my family of a change in fortunes, some for good, most for ill." Seeing the look on Ruth's face, he tried to shake off his terror.

He spoke a few words of reassurance to his newly betrothed, which neither of them believed, kissed her goodbye, and galloped away.

In a skirmish the next day, Colonel Howell was shot. He was brought to Farmer Jarrett's house for nursing, though Ruth's father was reluctant to have a British soldier under his roof. To Ruth's relief, the wound was fairly minor and would soon heal. To add to her joy, her father grew fond of the young man and consented to their marriage if Howell would leave the British army. The Colonel made this promise willingly and a secret marriage was soon arranged.

Then tragedy struck. Orders arrived demanding that Howell rejoin his regiment on the eve of an impending battle. Howell knew that to honorably resign his commission would take months, and he would be forced to fight and kill the Americans in the battle the next day. So he decided to marry Ruth, desert the British army, and hide away until it was safe to rejoin the Jarrett household.

Divesting himself of the British uniform, he donned the clothes of a civilian and stood with Ruth before a minister in the parlor of the Jarrett house. As he slipped the wedding ring on his beloved's finger and bent to kiss her, the roll of a drum sounded from outside. Howell and Ruth turned fearfully and listened as the invisible drummer climbed the steps, walked through the room, and exited via the far wall. Ruth clung to her new husband in terror, while the guests and clergy murmured in awe. Then they heard rough voices outside and someone pounded on the front door. Suddenly the house was full of British soldiers, come to capture Howell based on the testimony of one of the Jarrett servants, who hated the red coats and had betrayed them. Howell was arrested, tried, and shot for desertion. At the moment he died, Ruth, sobbing alone in her bedchamber at home, heard the faint, unmistakable roll of a phantom drum.

Journalist tests purported Bigfoot feces sample and finds it contains mostly opossum DNA

- Houston Chronicle reporter Eric Berger had the reputed Bigfoot DNA tested by a top geneticist
- Melba Ketchum had claimed that she collected Bigfoot droppings and used DNA tests to prove the existence of the mythical creatures
- The sample actually contains opossum DNA, along with traces from other forest animals

Texas veterinarian Melba Ketchum's claims that she proved the existence of Bigfoot with DNA evidence last fall caused even some serious scientists to stand up and take notice. Now, they're rolling over and playing dead. A Houston newspaper reporter had the purported Big Foot feces sample DNA tested by an independent geneticist and found Ketchum's 'evidence' isn't what she claims.

The sample contains mostly opossum droppings, mixed in with DNA from other animals, according to the tests.

Houston Chronicle science reporter Eric Berger says there is no evidence that any of the DNA in the droppings belongs to a Bigfoot or any other hominid cousins of humans.

When Ketchum released her 'scientific study' of Big Foot earlier this year, Berger hammered her for not submitting the paper to a credible peer-reviewed journal and not allowing mainstream researchers to verify her work. Instead, she launched a journal of her own, the DeNovo Scientific Journal, and published her findings online and charged $30 to read the work. 'If Ketchum really had the goods she would have co-authored the paper with reputable scientists and gotten the work published in a reputable scientific journal,' Berger wrote in February. 'Instead she's playing to an audience that doesn't understand how science works, that wants to believe Bigfoot exists and is willing to send her some cash to further their delusions.'

However, Ketchum approached Berger and offered him definitive proof of her findings - she would let his friend, a top Houston geneticist, take a sample of her Big Foot droppings and test it himself.

Ketchum claims the sample came from a family of ten Bigfoot that lives in northern Michigan. She says they left the droppings behind after eating blueberry bagels.

She claims that her analysis of the Big Foot's DNA shows that they are distant cousins to human beings - the result of a non-human hominid mating with human women about 15,000 years ago.

Berger admits he allowed himself to get momentarily excited by the prospect of testing Bigfoot DNA.

'If the evidence backed up Ketchum's claims, I had a blockbuster story. My geneticist source would have a hand in making the scientific discovery of the decade, or perhaps the century. Ketchum would be vindicated,' he wrote. Instead, he says, rational science came crashing down. The sample contained nothing more than the remnants left behind by common forest animals.

Request For Assistance

As part of our on going research and investigation into cult activity we would like to ask for help in expanding our database of ritualistic incidents. We are looking for any information on Ritualistic Crimes, personal accounts of cult encounters, animal or human sacrifice, and suspected ritual grounds in your area. A researcher would contact you with your permission or you can request a consultation. For the most part this information will be used to aid us in current and future research projects and would be greatly appreciated by the staff of UFORCOP. All information will be strictly confidential. Please direct your input to Hellhunterpa@gmail.com

We are looking for reports of mysterious lights or sightings of UFOs near Nuclear Power Plants, Military Bases or Airport Facilities. Contact butch@paufosearch.com

Information regarding Cattle Mutilations and UFO activity in the State of Oklahoma can be send to our Oklahoma UFO Research Group via email to William Hood at scal_ez9@yahoo.com

Reports of Paranormal Activity in or around Indian Burial Grounds or areas where Indigenous peoples encamped in the State of Pennsylvania are always sought after. A report of the activities and a detailed map of the area would be helpful in research and dispatching a mobile unit to investigate. Contact butch@paufosearch.com

We are looking for photographs of Military Trucks and Equipment along with personnel at the scene of the Kecksburg / Fireball Incident of December 9, 1965. Located in Mount Pleasant Township, Westmoreland County. If you have any such photographs please contact The UFO Research Center of Pennsylvania. butch@paufosearch.com

Cold case refers to an aged incident or sighting that has not been solved and is not the subject of current investigation. We are also seeking seasoned independent researchers to become part of the UFORCOP CCU in Pennsylvania and other States. If interested contact butch@paufosearch.com
